WELCOME TO THE
4TH ANNUAL CORE
CLINICAL OVERVIEW OF THE RECOVERY EXPERIENCE
JULY 10-13, 2016

C4 Recovery Solutions (C4) is honored to welcome you to the 4th Annual Clinical Overview of the Recovery Experience (CORE). The mission of C4, a non-profit organization, is to improve the accessibility and quality of addiction treatment, and to promote long-term recovery solutions. C4 uses four Cs—Collaboration, Convening, Conferencing, and Consultation to achieve its goals. In addition to CORE, C4 operates three other premier addiction conferences—the Cape Cod Symposium on Addictive Disorders (CCSAD), the West Coast Symposium on Addictive Disorders (WCSAD) and the Addiction eXecutives Industry Summit (AXIS). We invite you to explore our array of educational opportunities.

Many conferences focus on science and practice but with an alarming and growing emphasis on drug replacement therapies, recovery is increasingly playing a secondary role. While science and new clinical tools are important, they cannot replace the Twelve Steps as a key means of facilitating the personal growth that is necessary for a sustainable and long-term recovery. CORE highlights the critical importance of 12-Step processes and abstinence-based recovery and presents new options for productively integrating useful clinical tools into a larger recovery-oriented treatment culture.

The Founding Patrons and C4 developed and continue to shape CORE to be an opportunity for addiction professionals to advance their understanding of the principles behind abstinence-based recovery practices as well as to be a forum to increase the collective understanding of recovery processes. Our goal is to improve outcomes by better integrating abstinence-based practices and Twelve-Step principles into therapeutic initiatives. Developed more than 75-years ago, the Twelve Steps of Alcoholics Anonymous have withstood the test of time and science to emerge as a primary foundation for recovery from both alcoholism and drug addiction.

We offer a special debt of gratitude to our Founding Patrons and Fellowship Patron as well as our Platinum, Gold, and Silver Patrons, who with their generous support and underwriting allow us to continue to provide you with the best return on your investment of time, energy, and money.

#199. Memo to Self: Protecting Sobriety with the Science of Safety

Kevin McCauley, MD | ☘ Supported by: Northbound Treatment Services

Level of Instruction: All

Early sobriety is a frightening time, but many professionals, such as commercial airline pilots, participate in monitoring programs that give them excellent success rates getting into long-term remission. This is the exciting new area of "Recovery Management" - organizing coordinated, integrated support systems around people seeking sobriety to help them begin, maintain, and strengthen their recovery. In this lecture Dr. Kevin McCauley re-lives his own precarious early sobriety - negotiating hazards such as hostile prosecutors, treatment programs with divided loyalties, and his own craving brain. By falling back on his training as a flight surgeon, and by applying the same safety practices used to prevent aviation mishaps, Dr. McCauley was able to replicate the sobriety habits and success of recovering pilots and health care professionals. When viewed through the lens of safety, recovery is neither rare nor random - with the right kind of support, it can even be expected.

#200. Ouroboros, The Snake Eating Its Tail, or Pain Management Is Painful

Terrance Reeves, MD, FACS ABAM | ☘ Supported by Destin Recovery Center

Level of Instruction: All

Current chronic pain management practices are creating even more pain in a self-perpetuating cycle. Yes, opiate pain pills are addictive, even when used for "real" pain. The chronic pain management industry has produced the number one cause of unintended deaths in the US, and now skyrocketing heroine overdoses. I will show how opioid pain medicines not only perpetuate the pain, but actually make it far worse. The side effects of chronic opioid ingestion are progressive and severe, often leading to other dependencies. Opioids produce hyperalgesia, anxiety, insomnia, bipolar disease and misery, and these practices are perpetuated by money, politics and history. I treat many "walking zombies" taking meds "as prescribed" while still suffering severe pain and other Doctor created issues. Fortunately, there are very good alternatives that do not involve addictive substances. What are these alternatives and how do we get there?

#210. Adolescent and Young Adult Continuum of Care: Increasing Engagement and Decreasing Trauma

Heather Hayes, MEd, LPC, CIP | ☘ Supported by Origins Recovery Behavioral Healthcare

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

The young adult population can be difficult, challenging, and rewarding to intervene on. Developmental issues, drug impact upon an undeveloped brain, and lack of impulse control potentially escalating to violence must be considered and evaluated. As Interventionists and behavioral health experts, we have learned just as much from our missteps than we have from our successes; the entire evolutionary process has shaped a new set of guidelines for safely and effectively engaging adolescents, their families/support systems, the treatment they seek, and the long-term strategy for keeping everyone

Monday Schedule of Events

anchored to the most beneficial path. Without effective communication, awareness of emerging trends, and healthy engagement by everyone involved, the long-term continuum of care suffers; our workshop will address the best ways we've learned to secure optimal, long-term outcomes.

This workshop is designed to help identify the differences in intervening on the young adult while effectively implementing a long-term continuum of care that engages the entire support system, while teaching participants to recognize and embrace the emerging trends they must acknowledge in order to maintain success. In addition, the participants will learn skills to handle and de-escalate conflict and liability within the intervention and throughout the continuum of care.

#211. Avoiding the Therapeutic Dilemmas and Pitfalls of the Past 70 Years in Treating Addiction by Integrating the Sciences of Medicine, Therapy and Spirituality

Chico West, Mike Neatherton, & Mike Early |  Supported by Gaston House & Northbound Treatment Services

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

The abstinence based addictions treatment field is at a critical juncture which may determine the survival of some programs. Based on the increasing need to demonstrate program efficacy facing the Affordable Health Care Act and Parity, many addiction treatment programs have developed a renewed interest in collecting outcomes. Even when outcomes are collected with rigor, an emphasis on outcomes alone as a way of promoting and defining treatment has limitations. They are one spoke on the wheel along with research, clinical judgment, client feedback, clinical supervision, aggregated client data, context, spirituality and case management being equally important in driving quality care. The integration of the above can create the basis for establishing a treatment program and evolving a superior care system. This workshop will examine the essential elements in utilizing outcomes and research i.e. moving from theory to practice, for providing quality care and evolving a healthy care system.

#250. Ethics Perspectives in Addiction Treatment - An Industry Roundtable

Paul Alexander, Bob Ferguson, & Sherri Layton, MBA, LCDC, CCS |  Supported by Northbound Treatment Services, Jaywalker Lodge & La Hacienda Treatment Center

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

Traditional outreach and marketing channels are under siege as consumers begin their search for answers with Google instead of picking up the phone and calling around for a personal or professional referral. With SEO (search engine optimization) now threatening to supplant reputation and word of mouth as the dominant outreach strategy in our industry, how do treatment programs and private practitioners ensure clients are connecting with the right resources to receive the services they need to recover? How do providers continue to survive in this environment and not be persuaded to engage in questionable marketing practices?

Join our panelists for a lively overview and interactive discussion of the ethical issues at the forefront of today's ever-increasingly competitive landscape in addiction treatment. Along with ethical concerns in the internet marketing arena, the session will consider provider and vendor ethics from an historical, legal, and policy perspective. How do we discern what is legal from what is ethical? How do past practices and historical perspective inform today's decision makers in addiction treatment? And how can ethical providers compete in an environment where the lines between right and wrong have become blurred?

Monday/Tuesday Schedule of Events

Monday Early Afternoon Workshops: 2:00 PM – 3:30 PM

#251. Current Trends in Addiction Medicine: The Times They Are A-Changin'

Chapman Sledge, MD | ↗ Supported by Cumberland Heights

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

Addiction Medicine is a medical specialty in a state of transformation. Patterns of substance use are rapidly changing. Marijuana use has become mainstream with the changing legal climate. Access to prescription stimulants is increasing dramatically. The opioid epidemic continues to evolve, and death from overdose has established addiction as more deadly than ever. Just as our patients presenting for treatment are evolving, so is the treatment that is rendered. Medication assisted treatment delivered in the physician office is an increasingly common scenario. Pharmacotherapy is often delivered in lieu of traditional psychosocial interventions and conventional abstinence based residential treatment. Diversion and abuse of buprenorphine must be monitored. It is critical that adequate outcome studies be carried out to dictate the direction treatment in the future.

#252. Integrative Approach to Treating Dual Diagnosis

Marcie Chambers, PhD | ↗ Supported by Rose Transition Home

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

This presentation will discuss the importance of, and methods used to provide effective treatment to dual-diagnosed clients using an integrative model of treatment. “Dual Diagnosis Treatment” is a common phase in our industry but what does that really mean? We will examine specific treatment modalities that, when combined, are effective in helping clients recover from more than one diagnosis concurrently. In an Integrative Model, it is not assumed that one modality is effective in treating all mental health and substance abuse/dependence disorders. Instead, many evidence based treatments are combined to treat the whole person and not just the manifestation or symptoms of a disorder.

Afternoon Break in the Exhibit Hall: 3:30 PM – 4:15 PM

Monday Late Afternoon Workshops: 4:15 PM – 5:45 PM

#275. Attachment, Trauma, and Addiction: Working with Attachment Disordered Patients in Primary Addiction Treatment

Michael Barnes, PhD, LPC | ↗ Supported by CeDAR

Level of Instruction: Intermediate/Advanced

For decades counselors have recognized that individuals who grow up in neglectful and traumatizing family systems develop attachment styles that promote personal safety, while inhibiting emotional and social development. Patients in addiction treatment program who struggle in these two areas will often fail to meet recovery milestones and appear resistant or unmotivated. It is for this reason that addiction professionals must understand the relationship between attachment and developmental trauma. They must also know how these issues inhibit the therapeutic relationship and what interventions are needed to assist patients to successfully engage in treatment. Attend this session to learn how childhood neglect and trauma influence neurobiology, affect regulation and adult relationship development. You will also learn about the importance of pace when building a therapeutic relationship, and how to identify individual and group interventions that can maximize treatment outcomes.

#276. An Industry Divided: Putting the Patient First in the Abstinence vs. Medication Debate

Dirk Eldredge, CADC-I | ↗ Supported by Jaywalker Lodge

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

While complete abstinence from drugs and alcohol is an essential strategy in recovery, is not the ultimate goal of sobriety to live a life of joy, abundance and meaning? Sustainable and authentic recovery is achieved through rigorous attention to our spiritual condition, working the steps and helping another alcoholic/addict. The philosophical divide between medication-assisted treatment and abstinence based recovery threatens to split our field down the middle. This session will examine what's working and how to best serve each precious life that is entrusted with our care. With passionate and responsible advocates on both sides, treatment providers must weigh the evidence and consider which approach is best suited for which client profile and why. The session will present new research on abstinence-based models, and participants will examine clinical and ethical considerations in the context of both 12 Step and medication assisted treatment.

Tuesday Schedule of Events

Monday Early Evening Workshop: 5:45 PM - 7:15 PM

#299. Shame and Guilt: Childhood Issues, Addictive Thinking, and Relapse

James Fenley, MD |  Supported by The Darryl Strawberry Recovery Center

Level of Instruction: Intermediate/Advanced

For the alcoholic or addict, feelings of isolation, hopelessness, inadequacy, and defeat are common on entering treatment. Early in the recovery process Shame and Guilt inevitably "raise their heads" and too often keep the addict's attention on the past and not the present. I often tell my patients "there is no place in recovery for guilt or shame." This is a view not shared by everyone in the field. I will discuss guilt's role as one the two primary barriers to patients once again obtaining maintenance long term recovery after years of trying, childhood shame and its adult consequences, as well as other topics. In my one on one interaction with alcoholics and addicts over the last 30 plus years, I have found common sense, insight oriented therapy, and a spiritual message of grace as the most effective tools for providing emotional relief. At the core of this discussion must be the consistent message, we are dealing with a brain disease, not a moral weakness.

#300. Understanding Addiction Interaction: Treatment and Recovery

Patrick Carnes, PhD, CAS |  Supported by The Meadows & Caron Treatment Centers

Level of Instruction: Intermediate/Advanced

"Addictions more than coexist; they interact, reinforce, and become part of one another. They become packages." This quote by Dr. Patrick Carnes emphasizes the significance of understanding addiction interaction. As those in recovery work their program, most discover that they have more than one addiction and that these addictions work together and trigger one another. This is Addiction Interaction. Often establishing sobriety is like playing a game of "whack-a-mole" where an individual is managing one addiction only to find another asserting itself, demanding their attention. As treatment providers learn more about addiction interaction, they can in turn help those individuals in addiction treatment to obtain a more comprehensive recovery plan, addressing all addictions and developing a long-term recovery.

Dr. Carnes will present information related to the nature of process addictions and will focus on the development, assessment, treatment, and essentials for recovery from process addictions. The different types of addiction interaction will be discussed and presented with appropriate treatment strategies for each. Specific focus will be paid to the interaction of sexual addiction and chemical addiction. A systemic treatment approach will be presented emphasizing effective diagnosis, assessment, and treatment for addiction interaction.

Dr. Carnes will discuss the "Black Hole" of Addiction Interaction addressing the different types of addictions; substances, process, core affect states, and relationships and how they engage the main addiction neuropathways of arousal/pleasure, disassociation/fantasy/escape, numbing/satiation, and deprivation.

Who Should Attend?

Physicians, Psychologists, Social Workers, Marriage and Family Therapists, Alcohol and Drug Counselors, Mental Health Counselors, Rehabilitation Counselors, Educators, Collegiate Recovery and Professional Monitoring Organizations. Anyone whose life has been touched by the addictive process.

Tuesday Schedule of Events

Morning Break in the Exhibit Hall: 10:00 AM – 10:45 AM

Tuesday Mid-Morning Workshops: 10:45 AM - 12:15 PM

#310. Incorporating Spirituality: Rounding out the Evidence

Jack Abel, MDiv, MBA & Marty Ferrero, MA, CADC, CCS |  Supported by Caron Treatment Centers

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

This workshop considers the ASAM and DSM 5 documents in relation to use disorders and established models of spiritual assessment and care as applied in hospital and end of life settings. Clinicians working with substance use disorders will learn to integrate spiritual care assessments that are not specific to a particular faith tradition and are instead grounded in the best practices of hospital and hospice chaplaincy. Limits of evidence based practice, while important to understand, need not rule out spiritual care. Well-formulated and established models including spirituality types, learning styles, grief and loss, human development, faith development, trauma recovery, attachment theory, art and music therapy, and twelve step facilitation are integrated with accepted principles of patient-centered chaplaincy services in assessment and integrated, multidisciplinary care of the patient's web of connectedness and self-understanding. Credentialing, education, and best practices for professional spiritual care services in the context of addiction are reviewed.

#311. Addiction is a Chronic Relapsing Brain Disease; an Overview of the Neurobiology of Addiction and Recovery.

Robert Simpson, MD |  Supported by Cirque Lodge

Level of Instruction: All

This presentation will address the roles of; stress, genetics/epigenetics, reward dysregulation, memory and motivation as the basis for addiction, as outlined by the American Society of Addiction Medicine. There will be an overview of relevant research and brain imaging, which will be presented in an informative yet approachable manner. The objective is to help the listener to understand the neurobiological basis for the behaviors of individuals with the disease of addiction. To understand why abstinence based recovery is a sensible approach based upon these mechanisms and why 12 step recovery fosters both brain remodeling and behavior change. The objective is to help the audience foster recognition of and compassion for the behaviors of addicted individuals as being manifestations of a disease state.

Tuesday Luncheon: 12:15 PM - 1:45 PM

Join us for a delightful complimentary luncheon and discussion (Pre-registration required)

#350. Family Participation in Chemical Dependency Treatment

Katie McQueen, MD |  Supported by La Hacienda Treatment Center

Level of Instruction: All

Addiction is a family disorder, leading to multiple complications for family members and concerned significant others. Family members can play a crucial role in treatment seeking and outcomes. By the end of this session attendees will be able to list the specific procedures involved in Community Reinforcement and Family Training (CRAFT) as well as the benefits of family involvement to family members. We will compare and contrast assumed roles of family in recovery from chemical dependency and eating disorders and discuss future directions for research and clinical practice in helping family members effectively cope.

Tuesday Early Afternoon Workshops: 2:00 PM - 3:30 PM

#351. Mentoring for Leadership Development - Preparing the Next Generation to Preserve Our Clinical Principles

Sherri Layton, MBA, LCDC, CCS |  Supported by La Hacienda Treatment Center

Level of Instruction: Intermediate/Advanced

CORE attendees understand the importance of 12-Step principles and abstinence-based practices in recovery. Our organizations stand firm in this philosophy. If your leadership changed would those who come behind you hold fast to what you have painstakingly created, and perhaps struggled to maintain? Are you preparing your next generation of leaders? Mentoring is a well-researched strategy for leadership development and can position your organization for the future. Sherri will share experience gained from helping create and implement a mentoring program at La Hacienda. The program design will be presented as a model to work from, as well as research-based best practices from other industries, and adaptation of those practices to the business of addiction treatment. We will explore candidate and mentor selection, the relationship between mentee and mentor, and typical problems to avoid. Program participants will leave with an extensive framework from which to develop their own mentoring program.

Tues./Wed. Schedule of Events

#352. Healing the Core for Recovery: Big T, Little T and Chronic T Trauma

Adrian Hickmon, PhD | ☀ Supported by Capstone Treatment Center

Level of Instruction: All

This presentation discusses treatment of people who struggle with chemical and process addictive behaviors that have trauma history that impacts addiction development, maintenance and the process of recovery. The traumatizing shame-messages that occur simultaneously with Big T, Little T, and Chronic T traumas often result in a self-loathing identity and a self-sabotaging paradigm. This tandem works like a fight-flight-freeze auto-response and impairs or prevents relational intimacy while causing relational isolation; the perfect storm for addiction and chronic relapse. This presentation summarizes an integrated therapy model specifically aimed at healing trauma in recovery.

Afternoon Break in the Exhibit Hall: 3:30 PM – 4:15 PM

Tuesday Late Afternoon Workshops: 4:15 PM - 5:45 PM

#375. Working with Families Affected by Addiction

Janet Fluker, LPC, CPCs

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

Addiction is a family disease with recognizable symptoms and behaviors. This workshop will offer professionals who work with families impacted by addiction practical tools and interventions to guide families into their own recovery process.

#376. Are your clients a Pain? Motivational Interviewing, SFT and the Resistant Client

Louise Stanger, EdD, LCSW, BRI II, CIP & James Flowers, PhD, LPC-S | ☀ Supported by Kemah Palms Recovery

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

Do your clients and their families make you cringe? Join us for a lively discussion using motivational interviewing, solution focused therapy and current pain recovery modalities to reduce resistance.

Carol Lind Mooney, JD, CAC-II & John Williamson | ☀ Supported by Willingway & Recovery Houses Services

Level of Instruction: Intermediate

With the expanding demographics and number of people seeking treatment for addiction, the need for a continued and structured recovery experience is growing. Knowing when to make that recommendation is an important continuation of the initial treatment process. Even more challenging, in a widely unregulated industry, is finding a program that will successfully motivate and engage your clients to continue on their path to permanent abstinence. This workshop will teach participants how to assess an individual's need for a structured living environment and how to select a program in the maze of "halfway houses" available to treatment professionals. It will describe key components of an effective recovery residence while demonstrating successful techniques for motivating the variety of clients during the first year of recovery. Individuals who work in recovery residences will also benefit from learning how to utilize these key components in meeting client needs.

#401. Show Me: Using the Creative Process and Interventions in Addiction Treatment

Rebecca Sledge, LPC-MHSP, ATR | ☀ Supported by Cumberland Heights Treatment Foundation

Level of Instruction: Intermediate/Advanced

Attendees will learn of specific interventions for the first 4 steps to support their clients and follow case studies to illustrate the role of the creative process in addiction treatment. Attendees will also have the chance to participate in an art therapy directive and examine how they can incorporate more complex creative practices into their own work with clients.

#410. New Boundaries and Ethics: Are you Ready?

Philip Hemphill, PhD, MSW | ☀ Supported by Lakeview Health

Level of Instruction: Intermediate/Advanced

The lack of professional behavior is the single most common cause for disciplinary action among practicing professionals and academics. Society must feel and see one's professional code of ethics which is based on a commitment to competence, integrity, morality, altruism, and trustworthiness. Professionals are expected to be governed by a promotion of the public good within their domain. A growing and converging body of literature has established an association between professional's with boundary violations and safety/quality within these organizations. Professionals must rely on internal guides of character while external guides such as laws, policies, and ethical codes of conduct are fashioned into a practice. This workshop will explore professionalism in both individuals and groups while reinforcing ethical standards surrounding confidentiality and dual relationships. Through didactic and interacting in small group discussions on boundaries and professionalism you will learn effective tools and processes for managing relationships and distressing life events.
